My car is like three miles away. It's raining hard and the welt from the rubber bullet is killing my thigh. Should have had more than yogurt for lunch today

Seeing some folks debating what I was hit with. It's not a marking round, at least there was no color residue on my clothes. Plastic base, squishy end. Don't know if it's rubber or another kind of less lethal round.

Are MPD officers required to document when they fire these non-lethal but injurious rounds? Is there an inventory of them. Do they get checked in and out like lethal ammunition? Do witnessing officers have to report when fellow officers fire these rounds?

Duane Dorow @D... · May 27

My point is they should and any potential injury to residents should be documented. Not just fire and forget. Thank you for being present and reporting and taking these risks. We appreciate it! Hope you can rest.

Ow! I've never smelled teargas up close or been struck by rubber bullets, but I admire each and every one of you who've been put in harms' way to cover this and the rest of the chaos in These Times. Let this

Here's my leg today. This is from a non-lethal projectile, fired by Minneapolis police while I covered protests of #GeorgeFloyd last night. Stay safe folks

Have you heard of any police officers who suffered physical harm last night?

Not your first, right? Or am I thinking of another @mndailynews staffer from the RNC, Spring Jam riot days?

Andy Mannix (@... · May 27 · Yeah I took face full of mace as an unpaid intern for city pages at the RNC... that probably was more painful

Takeaways from the night:

Police and national guard much more effective at breaking big group into smaller more manageable ones.

We saw much less violence from previous nights.

And cops seemed to care zero about press exemption from curfew.

I'm with @ByLizSawyer and 2 Kurdish journalists and 1 Japanese journalist near 5th precinct. Cops told us to go home. When we said we were press one said "Your cards are bullshit" #GeorgeFloyd

St. Paul Police also told media to go home tonight. I showed my press badge and was told "doesn't matter"

We've have several photographers threatened and assaulted covering the protests and riots here in Minneapolis. It's been increasing every day. I covered Ferguson after Mike Brown was killed and this is exponentially more violent and chaotic.

Santiago Mejia  @SantiagoMejia · May 30

I'm happy to hear that. Unfortunately, photographs are the targets. Getty Images photog and another freelance photog were robbed at gun point. AP photogs got hit with a flying hammer, rubber bullet and had their laptop stolen. An SF Chronicle photog had their laptop stolen. twitter.com/sovernation/s...

I'm livid at the complete and utter disregard by law enforcement tonight in Minneapolis of the exempt status of press covering the protests here.

@GovTimWalz @MayorFrey @MayorCarter all exempted press and yet police arrested, fired projectiles at, and pepper sprayed journalists.
